

REVIEW PLANS FOR ELEMENTARY SCHOOL IN FALLS

Special County Board Bldg. Clinic Go Over Details

NEW FAIRLESS SCHOOL

Building Will Have 28 Class Rooms and Also A Cafeteria

A special County Board Building Clinic has just reviewed the preliminary plans for a new Fairless Elementary School in Falls Township. Regional Superintendent Medill Bair reviewed the special conditions prevailing in Falls Township which made it necessary for a new elementary school to take care of elementary school increases as well as perhaps one grade or two of junior high school pupils.

A. E. Micklewright, the architect for the Falls Township Board, discussed in detail the preliminary plans for the new building which will have twenty-eight classrooms, a multi-purpose room, a cafeteria, and a library.

Dr. Ross Neagley, Professor of Education, Temple University, was a special consultant who was secured to review the plans. He was assisted by two elementary school supervisors, Meredith Smith, Toltickon Valley, and Alta Leary, Centennial. The consultants thought the preliminary plans called for an outstanding elementary school. They praised in particular the fact that the building was a one-story structure of modern design and that it had provision for self-contained classrooms for all pupils. Dr. Neagley particularly emphasized the desirability of every modern elementary school having self-contained classrooms with outside exits, sinks, and lavatories in each classroom.

In attendance also was Mr. Alvin Thompson, president of the Falls Township School Board. Twenty superintendents were also present.

The educational requirements for the new school were originally developed by the teachers working under Regional Superintendent Bair and Elementary Supervisor Cora Holsclaw.

Dr. Clarence Ackley, of the Pennsylvania Economy League, also submitted many detailed suggestions for the new building.

TO DECENTRALIZE HEALTH PROGRAM

State Making Far-Reaching Plans to Shift The Responsibility

TO COUNTY LEVEL

Following is the first of three exclusive articles by International News Service detailing Pennsylvania's long-range plan to decentralize its public health program by forming county units.

By Al Spivak

INS Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, Sept. 25—(INS)—Far-reaching plans to decentralize Pennsylvania's public health program by shifting responsibility to the county level are being whipped into shape by officials at Harrisburg.

The state advisory health board is preparing a master plan containing recommendations to be submitted to the commissioners of Pennsylvania's 67 counties before the end of the year.

Gov. John S. Fine and other state officials are convinced that a revamped organization is the only cure for the commonwealth's lagging public health program.

County officials nevertheless will be under no compulsion to accept the board's proposals because the "local health administration law" signed by the Governor August 24 is merely of an enabling nature.

"Our hope at present is that three or four county health departments will be formed within a short time," continued on Page Three

PUSH DRIVE ON THE RECKLESS DRIVERS

County Authorities Intend To Bring Speeding To A Halt

NAMES TO DEP'T

The drive of Bucks County authorities to bring to a halt the reckless operation and speeding of automobiles on the roads in the county is still being pushed with vigor.

It has been announced by Walter C. Schroeder, Deputy Clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions, the names of approximately 40 defendants have been certified to the Department of Highway Safety, at Harrisburg, for revocation of their automobile driver's license, a new all-time record for Bucks county for a period of two weeks.

The persons whose names have been certified either were convicted or pleaded guilty of driving while drunk, failure to stop at the scene of an accident or driving an automobile after the revocation of a driver's license.

OFFICIAL CENSUS FIGURES RELEASED

BRISTOL GIVEN 12,710

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25—Slight variation is shown from the preliminary census figures released 15 months ago and the official count of the population of communities in Bucks County made public yesterday.

A population increase is shown in all of the districts in Bucks County during the past 15 years. Morrisville led all other Bucks County communities in rate of population gain during the past 15 years, it was revealed yesterday by the Philadelphia regional office of the Census Bureau.

Of 27 Bucks County municipalities listed, all showed a population rise over the 15-year span, New Hope, with only 13 more residents than in 1940, registered the smallest gain. The famed art center increased from 1,953 to 1,966 in the past decade.

Inspect New Quarters of County Sup't of Schools

Bucks County Commissioners Simon K. Moyer and Joseph Halliwell together with the Bucks County Board of School Directors formally inspected the new quarters of the County Superintendent of Schools at Doylestown last night. According to H. Franklin Moore, president of the Bucks County Board, the County Commissioners and the County Board were pleasantly surprised by the new facilities. Fred Martin, under whose direction the renovations were consummated, was also present.

After the inspection the County Board plunged into a long agenda which included many of the pressing problems before Bucks County school boards.

U. S. Senator James Duff informed the County Board that a decision on the declaration of Bucks as a critical area was imminent.

The County Board decided to participate in two regional planning conferences. One on September 29 at the Friends Central School and one on October 5 at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

The County Board will be represented at the State School Directors Association Meeting at Harrisburg on October 9th and 10th.

Mrs. Alois Metzl, George School Teacher, Completes Sabbatical Leave

CITES THE PROBLEMS

GEORGE SCHOOL, Sept. 25—Austria today shows great vitality and faith in the future, in spite of the fear of war sweeping across Europe, it was reported this week at George School by Elisabeth Metzl, French and German teacher who with her husband, Alois, recently finished a 15-month sabbatical leave in her native country and Belgium, Denmark, France, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Yugoslavia. She had not seen Austria since 1937.

"I found the people proud of their own government and interested in politics," she said. "Vienna, one-third of whose principal buildings were damaged or destroyed in the war, is being rebuilt at a great rate. The cultural life of the city of two million has been completely revived."

ADDITION BEING BUILT, ST. THOMAS CHURCH, CROYDON

50-Foot Extension Will Enlarge Church and Add Two Classrooms

WILL BE OF BRICK

Expected To Be Completed Within Three-Month Period

CROYDON, Sept. 25—St. Thomas Aquinas Roman Catholic Church, and parochial school, here, are in the process of being considerably enlarged.

Work of excavation started several days ago, and now construction is underway, on a 50-foot addition at the front of the edifice, along Bristol Pike.

The pastor, the Rev. Joseph Diamond, announced today that the new addition will be of brick construction, the same as the present edifice, and that it will be completed in about three months.

The addition will enlarge the main part of the church to accommodate about 200 more worshippers; and will provide two more school classrooms.

This is one of several sections included in the building plans some years ago to give adequate services for parishioners.

Hundreds Attend Housing of Fire Engine

NEW HOPE, Sept. 25—More than 500 of this town's 1,059 population gathered on Main street in front of the Eagle Fire Co. building here Saturday to watch the ceremonies in connection with housing the new $15,000 fire engine.

Nine fire companies from neighboring communities took part in an hour-long parade that preceded the official welcome to the engine, which was bought entirely by public subscription.

Frank Faust, president of the Eagle Fire Company, traced the history of this volunteer group, the oldest in Bucks County, to its founding in 1732.

The dinner will get underway at seven o'clock in Goodwill Fire Co. No. 3, station.

This will be the first meeting of the association's fourth year, and will be the first session over which the new president, Francis J. Byers, will preside.

An entertainment will follow. It is expected that approximately 200 officials of the 23 boroughs in Bucks County will attend.

TOO SECRET WEAPON?

It's often said that every war is fought with the weapons of the last conflict. There is a great deal of truth in that—in the sense that weapons devised during a war almost never come into play in time to have a decisive effect on the outcome. But perhaps the observation should read: Every war is fought with the weapons of the last one, provided the military doesn't forget what they were.

That amendment seems justified in view of a story just brought to light. It is the story of "a super-secret weapon developed in World War II that became so enmeshed in military secrecy few people knew how to use it effectively when the Korean war broke out."

It is the story of the proximity fuse and how it was not at first employed against the enemy in Korea—because nobody with authority knew its capabilities.

The proximity fuse is a device that explodes shells, rockets or bombs when they near the target. Missiles equipped with it are deadly anti-personnel weapons because they can be exploded over the heads of troops—and foxholes are poor protection against shrapnel coming from overhead. That was proved during the Battle of the Bulge in World War II. But when the fighting began in Korea U. S. forces were not given shells and bombs with proximity fuses.

Why not? Various reasons were given, but the real reason was that the military men who should have known the value of the proximity fuse apparently were ignorant of what it could do. If its inventor had not become curious about the failure to use it, if he had not insisted on finding out what was wrong, if he had not managed to get a military mission sent to Korea to study the matter, that ignorance would have prevailed. His determination overcame it.

Today the Army is using 17 times as many proximity fuses as it did before. B-29s have become one of the most effective anti-personnel aircraft because of them, and the demand for them is taxing the supply.

Louis N. Ridenour, the 40-year-old physicist who developed the fuse and then brought about its resurrection deserves well of his country. The services could use more like him.

Statistics show a million World War II veterans are on the farm. And at least some of them must have seen Paris.

A man used to try to make more money than his family could spend. He must get discouraged now trying to keep ahead of Congress.

The law is on the job in Canada. A citizen who called police to tell them a pocketbook reported stolen had been found was informed the thief had been captured.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.

(Copyright, 1951
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—When you add up all the aid we've given Great Britain since the end of the war and then go over there and see what the British have done with it you can't help but shudder.

You have to remember that while we've been pouring more than a billion a year in actual cash into the British treasury the average citizen there is worse off economically than at any time in his life. And the standard of living of the average Mr. John Bull continues to decline.

The British Labor government let out a loud noise some time back about not needing any more U. S. European Recovery Program money. This was in December of 1950, after the British had used up the last of the $5,178,839,000 in credits advanced the Socialist government by the Truman administration since the end of World War II.

The Labor government didn't mean what it said. There is a military aid program on the books, as you know, and the British expect to get a choice chunk of that cash. In fact, Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Gaitskell trotted over here from London to help supervise slicing up the bankroll. He started off by demanding from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 tons of steel from U. S. mills for next year.

He didn't mention whether or not the British want it as a gift or plan to pay for it. But that's a minor detail, since the British are making a killing buying U. S. gold cheap and selling it in Europe and Russia at a profit so they can buy more gold in the U. S. or pay for such things as steel, if that's what they intend to do.

Three million tons of steel is a lot of metal. Most of it, if the British wheedle it out of the Truman administration, will come from the kitchen cabinets, refrigerators, automobiles, etc., that are not going to be made here at home for Americans.

If the British use the steel for weapons, we can't complain about lowering our standard of living. But the only basis we have of judging is past performance, and on these past performance scores the British Labor government is a bad risk.

When the European Recovery program was started the British made certain demands on the U. S. for sheet steel and finished machinery. The assumption was that the steel would be used to manufacture machinery for British use and that the finished machinery would be used in British factories and on British farms. The assumption was incorrect.

The British publish a monthly digest of statistics of the United Kingdom. It is very revealing in regard to what the British did with metals and machinery we sent to them.

For instance, after the war, we sent the British a lot of machine tools to help rebuild Empire economy and production. In 1948, the British exported to Europe, and Russia, 51,000 tons of machine tools. This was three times the amount of machine tools the British sell normally. And British machine tool production did not increase three fold. So the only assumption is that the British sold in Europe the machine tools obtained in the U. S.

In 1948, the British sold in Europe and Russia 43,300 tons of cranes, hoists and other lifting machinery. This was twice the pre-war sales. Again, the only assumption is that the cranes and hoists were sold out of the thousands of tons of machinery we sent to the British.

Farm machinery sales to Europe and Russia by the British were also three times normal during the time we were sending tractors, plows and the like to Britain by the shipload, because the Socialist government said Britain, herself, needed them.

One other clue to how the British will handle any additional finished steel we send them is contained in the same set of statistics. During all the time the British were tripling their export of machinery across the English channel, finished steel production in England increased only slightly. The stuff we sent was either shipped directly across the channel for sale or was worked into machinery and then sold.

All this was in 1948, when we were sending billions to the British in foreign aid. Will the same hold for 1952, when we once again start sending billions in steel and finished tools under the military aid program? We had better get some guarantees that it won't be, before we start loading the ships.

The Juror's Creed

Judge Keller last week read to the jurors and a crowded court room, the following, entitled, "A Juror's Creed"—a precedent in court here:

"I am a juror. I accept the position not only as an honor but as my solemn duty.

"I will remember the men who died to give us, and retain for us, the right of trial by jury, and I will reflect upon the fate of those people whose government gives them no such right.

"I will act with the realization that the success of the jury system depends upon the willingness of men and women of integrity and intelligence to accept jury service, and upon the fidelity with which they discharge that responsibility.

"I will be ruled by the law as given me by the judge.

"I will respect the judge, his education, training and experience. I will listen attentively to all the evidence, the arguments of counsel, and the judge's instructions, and will thoughtfully and impartially weigh the issues.

"During the trial I will not discuss the case with others nor permit others to discuss it with me; neither will I read about it in the newspapers, nor listen to broadcasts about it.

"While hearing a case I will keep an open mind until the case is finally submitted to the jury.

"I will observe legal procedure, not as red tape but as a device developed through thousands of years for the protection of the people.

"I will consider all the evidence fully and fairly, uninfluenced by friendship, sympathy, bias or prejudice.

"I will work with my fellow jurors in a spirit of tolerance and understanding and will endeavor to bring the deliberations of the whole jury to a true and honest verdict."

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Washington, Sept. 25.—In the last year hundreds of stories concerning General Eisenhower and the presidency have appeared in print. There is hardly an editor, columnist, commentator or correspondent who has not presented his view as to what the General has in mind and what he will do. Some have him drafted by one party; some by the other; some by both. Some have elected him overwhelmingly. Others have ruled him out altogether on the ground that he will not permit himself to be nominated. In all this welter of opinion, analysis, prognostication and speculation there have been very few basic facts until a few days ago when Mr. Roy Roberts, of the Kansas City Star, spoke out on a television program.

An old and warm friend of General Eisenhower and an exceedingly astute and experienced political observer, Mr. Roberts made two unequivocal statements: (1) that General Eisenhower is a Republican, (2) that "the military situation permitting" he will gladly accept a draft from the Republicans. There is so much supporting evidence for these statements that it does seem they must be generally accepted. This should mean an end to the utter nonsense that has been promulgated to the effect, first, that "Ike" does not yet know whether he is a Democrat or a Republican; second, that he has no desire to be President and the whole business is distasteful to him.

Concerning his Republicanism, Mr. Roberts explained quite simply that he knows the General is a Republican because he told him so. But it should not have been necessary to make that statement. For between the time the General became president of Columbia and the time he took over the job of building up a united armed force in Europe, he made a number of speeches in different places which made it perfectly clear that at least he was neither a New Dealer nor a Fair Dealer. Of course, he is in accord with the Administration's foreign policy, but that, at any rate, is supposed to be bipartisan, and there are a great many Republicans who support it, too. However, no one who has talked with "Ike" since his name has been connected with the presidency — and a good many have — has any doubt at all that there is almost nothing in the Truman domestic program to which he subscribes.

As to the General's personal feeling about being President, it goes without saying that if the military situation next year seems to need him he will not be available for a draft. But if "the military situation permits," common sense tells us that Mr. Roberts is right and he will "gladly accept a draft from the Republicans." Because it has been clear for five years that the idea of being President is not repugnant to the General and that, "military situation permitting," the desire is there — which is natural, human and right. If there were anything distasteful to him about the presidency, he long ago could have ended his boom and stopped the activity of his friends. All he had to do was follow the example of General Marshall, who, some years ago, met a similar movement to nominate him in these words: "I would like to say that I am not now — nor will I ever be — available for any elective office."

From that moment all speculation about General Marshall for President ceased. Everybody knew he meant exactly what he said. General Eisenhower could have said the same thing any time in the last five years with the same result. He never has said anything like it. The difference between him and General Marshall is that the latter really had no desire to be President and the whole discussion of his name was distasteful to him. If it were distasteful to "Ike" he could have stopped it just as effectively. Thus we have this situation — a majority of the people of the country, Democrats as well as Republicans, appear to want General Eisenhower for President. They do not much care what party he belongs to or what are his views; they just want him. He would like to be President and "the military situation permitting" would gladly accept a draft from the Republicans.

It is true that no one will ever be drafted for a presidential nomination against his will or without in some way conniving in the draft. The strength of Senator Taft makes it clear there can be no Eisenhower draft without a convention fight.

If Mr. Roberts makes sense — and he does — and if he understands Eisenhower's position — and he does — this means that, always with "the military situation permitting," "Ike" will be glad to have his supporters make a convention fight for him — and will help all he can without damaging his dignity or detracting from the draft idea. That his friends intend to make this fight is clear and the reasons they believe it will be successful are: first, because sentiment in the country is strongly pro-Eisenhower; second, because the Republican politicians, after four successive defeats, are exceedingly anxious to win; third, because while "Ike", like Marshall, could at any time put an end to his boom, he most conspicuously has failed to do so. To let his friends work for him up to the last minute and then declare himself out would be the kind of trick a man like Eisenhower does not play on his friends.

to demonstrate the value of the program," reported state health secretary Russell E. Teague.

He is certain that other counties will follow once the efficiency of the smaller units is proved.

Teague, chairman of the advisory health board, is directing a survey to determine how many local health units will be practical in Pennsylvania.

The survey must take into consideration location, area, incidence of communicable or other diseases, transportation and communication facilities and financial ability of each county to support or contribute to the support of a full-time department of health.

Teague points out that each unit must be large enough to provide:

A full-time director, doctors, clinicians, public health nurses, sanitary engineer, sanitarian, health educator, nutritionist, laboratory technician and a vital statistics registrar.

"We will propose to each county or group of counties what it can do to promote better health, how much it will cost and the minimum and maximum amounts the state can contribute," he said.

He emphasized that incentive for creating county health departments will have to come from the residents of each area.

"We may attempt through an educational program to convince people that a local program is best for them but we will not ask any county to start one," he said.

The people can express their will to create a county department via a popular referendum, he said, or it can be accomplished by a resolution of the county commissioners.

Back of the entire program, according to Teague, is a desire to provide closer local supervision of public health services.

The "local health bill" sponsored by Rep. William Z. Scott (R) Carbondale, summed it up this way:

"The protection of the health of the people in the furtherance of human well-being, industrial and agricultural productivity and the national security is one of the highest duties of the commonwealth."

"This cardinal duty can be performed only when adequate local public health services are available to all the people of the commonwealth, when they are maintained at a high level of professional and technical performance and when they are administered according to units of population sufficiently large to enable full time modern health services to be provided on the most economical basis by local communities working in partnership with the commonwealth."

Pennsbury Teacher Injured in Crash

A Pennsbury High School instructor was injured yesterday when the school's driver training car and another auto collided at the traffic light on Route 1 in Fallsington.

Medill Blair, Morrisville, supervising principal of Pennsbury Schools, operating a driver training car, was attempting to cross U. S. 1 at the traffic signal at Fallsington, travelling east, when a vehicle operated by Carl Rice, S. Mollie street, Philadelphia, travelling west, is said to have failed to stop for the traffic signal and struck the driver training car.

Robert Hubbard, Woodside, Industrial Arts teacher at Pennsbury, a passenger with Blair, was treated for possible internal injuries at the office of a Morrisville physician.

Damage to the driver training machine is estimated at $400, and to the Rice vehicle, $200.

Rice was charged with reckless driving and operating a motor vehicle without a license; taken before Justice of Peace Elwood Fritz and fined $42 and costs. Chief of Police Franklin Kirby investigated.

Anderson stressed that the joint rally would not be a fund raising meeting. "Our only purpose," he declared, "is to rally the community-conscious corps of businessmen to a meeting which can help give the United Fund drive the kind of kick-off it deserves. DVUF has a goal of a million dollars this year. The money will be spent for health, welfare and recreation services for the entire area. It merits our civic support."

Appleyard told the committee he expects to have a national figure here to address the gathering on Oct. 15.

Three new teachers who have joined the staff are Miss Sarah Cherry, music and instrumental; Miss Barbara Kaiser, business education; and Mrs. Doris Trolano, physical education.

Miss Cherry, who is a graduate of the high school and the State Teachers College in West Chester, goes to Delhaas with a bachelor's degree in music education, with a minor in biological science. In college she participated in the opera club, music club, symphony orchestra, the women's recreational association, basketball, the bridge club, and the college choir. During the past summer she did much painting on the farm on which she lives near West Chester. Miss Cherry makes her Bristol home at 622 Beaver street. Her teaching schedule includes music for the Delhaas grades and the teaching of instruments to all interested Bristol Township children.

Miss Barbara Kaiser, who commutes daily from her home in Elkins Park, is a graduate of the Abington Friends School and of Bucknell University, from which she received a bachelor's degree in business education in June, 1951. In college she was a member of Pi Beta Phi; was advertising manager of the "Bucknellian," the campus newspaper; and was active in hockey, basketball, volleyball and softball. During the past summer Miss Kaiser lived in Ocean City, N. J. For the past three summers she has raced speedboats there. In 1949 she won the season trophy, and since then she has placed in the races. At Delhaas her teaching schedule includes shorthand and typewriting for sophomores and junior business training for ninth-graders.

Joint Service Club Luncheon To Boost DVUF Kickoff Day

MORRISVILLE, Sept. 25 — William Anderson, president of the Lions Club of Morrisville, said today that a joint service club luncheon meeting will be held on behalf of the Delaware Valley United Fund on DVUF kickoff day, Monday, Oct. 15.

He appointed a committee to steer arrangements, headed by John J. Appleyard, who will be master of ceremonies for the event. Included are Dr. John A. Rank, president, Trenton Kiwanis; Matthew J. Kearney, president, Engineers Club; Karl G. Hastedt, president Trenton Rotary; Henry Ripley, president, Yardley Lions; Girard Pisano, president, American Business Clubs; and Constantine Diamond, president, Hamilton Lions Club.

Anderson said he expects the mass meeting to be limited to some 500 guests. Tickets will be distributed to service clubs, but only a limited number from each organization will be able to avail themselves of the opportunity, he explained.

Anderson stressed that the joint rally would not be a fund raising meeting. "Our only purpose," he declared, "is to rally the community-conscious corps of businessmen to a meeting which can help give the United Fund drive the kind of kick-off it deserves. DVUF has a goal of a million dollars this year. The money will be spent for health, welfare and recreation services for the entire area. It merits our civic support."

Says Austria Shows Faith In The Future

at George School in 1931, called Austria "the most significant demonstration in Europe of what Marshall Plan aid can do for a people."

She cited as current problems of that divided nation of 7,000,000 the postponement of a final peace treaty, the heavy costs of occupation (the U. S. pays its own way, but Russia does not and controls 1,500 industrial plants in its zone plus the Danube River shipping and vital oil wells), high taxes, the shortage of raw materials, and the influx of displaced persons from bordering Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and elsewhere.

"It seems likely that the economic strangulation going on now in Austria will turn the people either to the extreme left politically or to the extreme right," she observed. "Right at the moment Austrians favor Socialism. I think the political fate of the country depends on continuing economic aid from the United States."

Mrs. Metz was one of a group of 85 persons in the first Austrian group to visit Yugoslavia after Marshal Tito took over. Elsewhere, Mrs. Metz spent ten days on the French Riviera, went to Paris, the Pyrenees, Copenhagen, Hamburg, Duesseldorf for visits, and remained in the Tyrol for three weeks.

She and her husband recently finished the 10,000-mile journey on a French Line ship docking at New York.

Mrs. Frederick Hilbish, sweepstake winner, was presented with a small pottery tray, second place, Mrs. Taylor; third, Mrs. Cook and Miss Carol Curtin (tied). "Best piece" in the show was won by Mrs. Taylor.

Mrs. Cook, chairman of the show, introduced Mrs. Durrell Noyes, the guest speaker. Some of the highlights of Mrs. Noyes' talk were: "When entering flowers in a show a glass container is difficult to use as it shows the stems; leaves should be used to cover the stems. Always pick your flowers a day before and store in a dark place and in deep water. Remove buds from flowers that you plan to use in a show about two weeks before so that the scar will disappear where the bud was, always leave foliage on, but remove any leaves that are spotted or bug-marked. One or two flowers don't make a nice arrangement, but one flower and a bud are alright. When using light and dark flowers in the same arrangement always put the dark ones low in front and the light ones higher and in back. Yellow and red flowers show up better under electric lights. A flower show should always be educational for those giving it, for the community and for friends."

"A plain type container is best to use, and use a holder in your container. Flowers should be one-half times the height of the container. Arrange flowers so that they will hide the rim of the container." Punch and cookies were served by the club.

Himself took our infirmities, and bare our diseases.—Matt. 8:17.

This word takes us beyond the teachings of our Lord, to a record of the miracles which He wrought. As we read we are impressed with the ease with which He dealt with all the need and suffering of men. If His word and touch brought instant deliverance to men, it was because in a great mystery of grace He suffered in order to save. Every wonder of healing is made possible by the profounder wonder of the atonement. The blessings we receive from Him are most precious, because most costly. They are hallmarked with His blood. Both Isaiah and Peter declare that there is healing in His stripes. Someone has said that in Pilate's judgment hall, the Roman scourger of Jesus inflicted thirty-eight stripes on His back. Also the medical world says there are thirty-eight major diseases. If this is true, then for every disease there is a healing stripe on the flesh of Jesus' back. It is as we remember this tremendous fact that we are able to render to Him, our adorable Redeemer, the praise and honor due to His Name.

A surprise party was given on Saturday evening in honor of Carol Colclough, celebrating her 11th birthday anniversary. The affair was held at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Colclough, Emille road. Games were played and prizes given to Valerie Hibbs, Helen Ashworth and Lee Bruce. Refreshments were served. Others attending were: Steven and Roy Resavage, "Danny" Whips, Carol and "Peggy" Lou Bruce, Frances Lucas, Edna Novacs, June and Jay Colclough, Susan and "Penny" Geisel and their friend "Judy". Carol received gifts.

Richard Gill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gill, Cedar street, resumed his studies at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, on Monday for his final year.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gillies, Colingdale, spent Sunday with Mr. Gillies' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Angus Gillies, East Circle.

Ladies Auxiliary of Goodwill Hose Co., No. 3, will conduct a meeting and masquerade party October 2nd, in the fire station at eight o'clock. Members not masking will be fined.

Home for Blind Being Painted by Volunteers

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 25 — Members of Doylestown Lions Club, numbering 40, donned old clothes on Saturday and re-painted the exterior of the building of Bucks County Branch, Pennsylvania Association for the Blind, on South Main street. The structure is three stories high.

Promptly at eight the marathon painting project got underway, when C. William Lohler, executive director of the branch headquarters, who is totally blind, painted a portion of the building's entrance door.

His job was taken over by Dr. Manning Smith, president of the Doylestown Lions Club. Immediately the other volunteer painters swung into action, erecting ladders around the outside of the building. At noontime, wives of the volunteers took baskets of food and the volunteers enjoyed a picnic luncheon. All of the labor and tools were donated by the Lions, who have been active in work for the blind.

The paint was donated by Luther Nash, a contractor, and John Mueller, hosiery manufacturer. Supervision of the project was given by Wilson Nye, chairman of the painting committee, and Willard Meyers, of the Dublin Lions Club. Some 350 blind and partially blind

COUNCIL ROCK BY ONE POINT WINS OVER ST. FRANCIS

EDDINGTON, Sept. 25 — Council Rock Junior Varsity nosed out the St. Francis Vocational School JV's, 7-6, here yesterday afternoon.

Ed Atkinson's boot between the uprights for the extra point gave Council Rock the triumph. Mulhern scored the Council Rock touchdown on an end around play from the four. Council Rock had threatened the St. Francis goal early in the game.

Douglas scored for St. Francis in the second quarter but the play was recalled because of a penalty. But the Eddington lads were determined and mid-way in the second quarter, Douglas scored after a long pass. Wicks to Nylac had set up the score. Boys From Trenton Told To Stay in Own State and Shoot

NEWTOWN, Sept. 25 — Two Trenton, N. J., boys were severely reprimanded by Justice of Peace, Andrew H. Dillman, during a hearing held in his office Saturday on a charge of shooting of firearms.

The boys, both 19th grade pupils at Trenton high school, Anthony Calu, 15, Mercer street, Trenton, N. J., and George Prossas, 16, Jackson street, Trenton, N. J.

Three witnesses, students in 8th grade at St. Peter and Paul School, Trenton, N. J., were brought before Justice of Peace, Dillman: George F. Visokay, 12, 511 Center street; Eugene A. Pavoff, 14, 745 Second street; Jerry J. Bleinstein, 12, 515 Center street, all of Trenton, brought to the office by Special Police Officer Harry S. Hoffman, Lower Makefield area; also present were Robert Waterson and Charles W. Briegel, both officers of Lower Makefield township, where the shooting occurred.

Jerry Bleinstein stated one bullet just missed his stomach and George Visokay told that one skimmed over his head.

At 11:30 a. m. Saturday, special police officer, Harry S. Hoffman, reported to the bridge officer, John MacDonald, of Lower Morrisville bridge, that three boys had been shot at along the Penna. side of the canal a few minutes previous. Officer Hoffman was advised to inform the police of Lower Makefield township, whereupon he contacted Waterson and Briegel, who met Hoffman and the boys at the Black Rock Road and canal near the Calhoun street bridge at Morrisville. Police officers entered the woods and heard shots and bullets strike the water in the canal, where a group were fishing. Two shots barely missed the officers and struck a tree nearby.

Officers on searching found the two boys, Calu and Prossas, who both had 22 caliber long range rifles, Calu also bearing a Japanese machete (bush clearing device knife).

Anthony is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Calu. His father has a newspaper stand at Market and South Broad street, Trenton, N. J. George is the son of Michael Prossas, owner of Hunter's Restaurant, E. State street, Trenton, N. J.

Justice Dillman reminded the boys they were guilty of the reckless use of firearms and violating the fish and game laws of Penna., but being juveniles more or less protected them.

George Prossas stated it is the second time he has been shooting in this area since he is not allowed to do so in Trenton, whereupon the Justice told him to stay in his own state.

Justice Dillman reprimanded them severely and also told both the boys and their parents that if a similar occurrence happens they will find themselves in the county court at Doylestown.

Similar shooting instances have occurred in Lower Makefield township and the residents there desire their cessation.

A Pennsylvania Hunter May Kill Only One Deer In 1951

Some persons seem unsure as to the number of deer a hunter may legally kill in the Commonwealth in 1951.

In the interest of complete understanding, the Game Commission issues this clarifying statement: There will be three separate deer seasons this year, as follows: The first will be for archers only, October 15 to 27, inclusive, except the Sunday. In addition to a current Pennsylvania hunting license, a special $2.00 archery license is required. Both these licenses are necessary for everybody who desires to hunt deer in the special archery season (no exceptions). The second will be the customary "buck" season, December 3 to 13, inclusive, when only the regular hunting license is needed. In both of these seasons only male deer with two or more points to one antler may be taken. In the third, or antlerless season, December 14 and 15, only deer without visible antlers may be harvested. A $1.10 antlerless deer license is required of a "doe" hunter, in addition to the regular hunting license.

The Commission emphasizes that, regardless of the number of deer seasons or the number of licenses held by an individual, a hunter in Pennsylvania may legally take but one deer in 1951.

The law permits certain farmers and landowners to hunt during the regular buck season and during the antlerless deer season on their own and certain adjoining properties without any license. But farmers and landowners, like everyone else, must have a special archery license and a current Pennsylvania hunting license to hunt deer during the archery season.

Applications for special archery licenses and antlerless deer licenses will soon be available from all hunting license issuing agents, as well as the county treasurers and the Department of Revenue at Harrisburg.

Waterfowl Concentration On Schedule At Pymatuning

On September 1, Raymond A. Sickles, Crawford County game protector gave the waterfowl picture in the Pymatuning area thus:

"Again this year a good number of wild ducks have concentrated at Pymatuning Refuge before the fall migration gets into swing. In August, about 3,000 wild ducks (black and mallards) flew out of the refuge and fed on nearby, recently harvested grain fields. The grain from these fields had been combined and the ducks picked up what was left on the ground."

"Whether this is a concentration of locally raised wild ducks or whether it is an early movement of northern birds is still not determined, but the August concentration has been regular at Pymatuning for the past five years. There are still many young ducks, especially wood ducks, that are not yet mature enough to fly, and just a few days ago I saw a brood of young mallards that were not over 10 days old."

"Locally raised Canada geese are collecting in flocks, but they are still feeding inside the refuge area. They do not usually fly out to feed on nearby fields until the fall wheat is planted and large enough to pasture."

Applications For Antlerless Deer Licenses

Sportsmen would do a service to themselves and license issuing agencies if they would without applying for antlerless deer licenses until the Department of Revenue announces they are available.

A Seal In The Delaware River?

Occasionally, an animal from some far off land makes its appearance in Pennsylvania. How it found its way into the Commonwealth is always a matter of conjecture.

Game Protector D. S. McPeck, Jr., Boothwyn, reports the latest oddity. He says: "In August, a hooded seal swam up the Delaware River, an unusual occurrence. It was about 2,000 miles from its usual habitat. When captured by Fred Ulmer, Curator of Mammals, at the Philadelphia Zoo, the seal was very ill, no doubt from the filthy water in the river. It is now under treatment at the zoo and is doing very nicely." (Editors' Note: Since the preparation of this article the hooded seal mentioned here died).

Bucks Are Buddies In Late Summer

Says Game Protector Lewis H. Estep, Berwick: "Recently, Land Utilization Assistant Loran and I had the privilege of seeing six buck deer in one small field. Every one of them carried a legal set of antlers in the velvet."

Some Ducks Need A Compass

This summer, six-week-old ducklings were released by a game protector on State Game Lands in southern Bradford County.

On August 28, Eldon R. Clarke, refuge manager of the Montezuma National Wildlife Refuge, Seneca Falls, New York, reported that one of these Commission-released mallard-black ducks, bearing leg band No. 1206, turned up in one of the Fish and Wildlife banding traps, located 1½ miles west of the confluence of the Clyde and Seneca Rivers, in Seneca County, New York.

The spot where the duck was trapped is well over 100 miles from the release locality. While this incident is interesting to note, waterfowl experts say it is not unusual for ducks to fly northward a considerable distance in late summer.

Foxes Overcome Natural Fear To Threaten Trappers

Game Protector Carl B. Benson, who headquarters at Tionesta, Forest County, writes: "On my trap line the other day I found a gray fox in one of the traps. When I walked up he started barking. When I was about to put him out of commission two other foxes came running in. They, also, did a lot of barking. One came within about 40 feet of me." "On August 19, Game Protector Miller and I went out to do general law enforcement work and tend fox traps," writes Game Protector Arthur T. Bondi, Mercer. "In one of our traps we had a small gray fox."

While we attempted to get it out of the trap, it commenced to squall. Sure enough, he called in help. In a matter of seconds old mother fox was running around us defying us to molest her little pup."

Hawks Kill Snakes

Charles Gratton, foreman of a highway crew in Potter County, told Game Protector Keith C. Hinman, Mehoopany, the following story: "While he and his crew were repairing the Phoenix Run road about the first of August, they noticed a large grayish hawk making determined swoops at the ground. After the fourth dive, Gratton walked over to the place and found the hawk trying to make off with a large rattlesnake, but the reptile was too heavy for the bird to lift. The rattler's head had been neatly severed from its body."

Lynn B. Rosenkrans, of the Game Commission's northeastern division office, reports: "On August 9, I observed an osprey (fish hawk) take a water snake out of Beek Lake in Wyoming County."

Scouts Assemble At Valley Forge

Valley Forge and the meaning of the sacrifice of the men who camped there to the building of our Nation, and also its importance today in the loyalty of the people of America to our Democracy.

Each year a first aid kit is presented to the Troop which has a Scout who writes the best story of Valley Forge at the time Washington camped there. This year the award was given to Troop No. 58 of Warrington for the story which was written by Robert Wood of that Troop. The Scoutmaster of the Troop is Kenneth Shelly. A number of well written articles were presented to the Council in the Historic Competition, but in the opinion of the judges it was thought that the one written by Scout Wood was the best.

Singing at the event was led by Scoutmaster Samuel Lever, of Buckingham No. 59. The parade was under the direction of District Commissioner S. Walter Smith of the Perkiomen District.

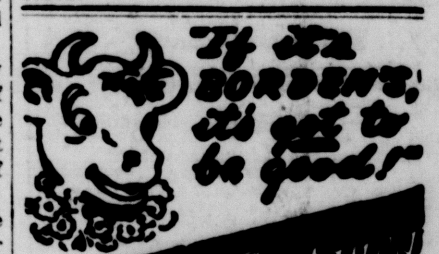

After a visit to the museum the scouts ate lunch and then, under Troop leadership, took part in the Historic Trail program, which led them to the various parts of Valley Forge. It was necessary for the Scouts to locate various points on the map in reference to the History of Valley Forge and every troop which participated completed the Valley Forge Trail. A number of the Troops of the Council had Historic Pilgrimages to other points of interest throughout Bucks County for which Credit is given in the Program of the Council. The Units which took part in the Pilgrimage on Saturday were: Doylestown Troop No. 24, Buckingham Troop

No. 59, New Hope Troop No. 33, Cornwells Troop No. 12, Andalusia Troop No. 17, Bristol Troop No. 25, Bristol Troop No. 2, Warrington Troop No. 58, Parkland Troop No. 62, Hilltown Troop No. 67, Doylestown Troop No. 71, and Sellersville Troop No. 1. The Pilgrimage ended as each troop returned to the Field Headquarters of the Council and checked in at the end of the Historic Trail.
